NOTICE

The quality of this microform is heavily dependent upon the quality of the original thesis submitted for microfilming. Every effort has been made to ensure the highest quality of reproduction possible.

If pages are missing, contact the university which granted the degree.

Some pages may have indistinct print especially if the original pages were typed with a poor typewriter ribbon or if the university sent us an inferior photocopy.

Reproduction in full or in part of this microform is governed by the Canadian Copyright Act, R.S.C. 1970, c. C-30, and subsequent amendments.

AVIS

La qualité de cette microforme dépend grandement de la qualité de la thèse soumise au microfilmage. Nous avons tout fait pour assurer une qualité supérieure de reproduction.

S'il manque des pages, veuillez communiquer avec l'université qui a conféré le grade.

La qualité d'impression de certaines pages peut laisser à désirer, surtout si les pages originales ont été dactylographiées à l'aide d'un ruban usé ou si l'université nous a fait parvenir une photocopie de qualité inférieure.

La reproduction, même partielle, de cette microforme est soumise à la Loi canadienne sur le droit d'auteur, SRC 1970, c. C-30, et ses amendements subséquents.
WHERE THE TONGUE ROOTS LIE

Patty Archer

A Thesis in The Department of English

Presented in Partial Fulfilment of the Requirements for the Degree of Master of Arts at Concordia University
Montreal, Quebec, Canada

June 1990
©Patty Archer, 1990
The author has granted an irrevocable non-exclusive licence allowing the National Library of Canada to reproduce, loan, distribute or sell copies of his/her thesis by any means and in any form or format, making this thesis available to interested persons.

The author retains ownership of the copyright in his/her thesis. Neither the thesis nor substantial extracts from it may be printed or otherwise reproduced without his/her permission.

ISBN 0-315-64661-6
ABSTRACT

Where the tongue roots lie

Patty Archer

The four sections that make up Where the tongue roots lie are linked by the theme of the narrator's search for family identity by the development of a history. This history juxtaposes myth and reality, document and fantasy, as the narrator tries to come to terms with what she discovers, about family, about her family, and about herself. Within each section, the poems are organized chronologically.

The first section, "To find such a thing", introduces the characters of the narrator, and her two sets of grandparents: Sam Archer and Sarah Pickles, and Tommy Walker and Jean Glen. The narrator develops the poetic field for the following sections by including poetic and prose poem adaptations of documents, letters, photos, archives, oral history, and dreams, recreating the search. Voices other than the narrator's are set off by italics, with different voices giving different sides to stories. Images of searching, isolation, anger, and ambiguity dominate, to be developed further in later sections.

The second section, "Grandparents — Sam & Sarah", explores the narrator's paternal grandparents' relationship. Images of manual labour, isolation within and away from family, alcoholism, industrial accidents and fear of the British Columbia countryside dominate the section. The understated tone echoes the family mythology of silence. Sam and Sarah's son absorbs their inability to communicate and his father's dependence on alcohol.

In the third section, "Grandparents — Tall Tommy Walker with Jean, and then her other husband", the narrator becomes fascinated with her maternal grandfather, Thomas Walker, and his influence on his family's life. Images of his alcoholism, romanticism and his crippling stroke dominate the section. Again, the family does not communicate, and is isolated by alcoholism and marital breakdown. The narrator tries to see Tommy and Jean's romance, marriage and divorce through their eyes. The scars left by Jean's second husband's molestation of children are revealed, as Jean's daughter tries to escape her family as Jean did, through marriage.
In the final section, "Descendants", the weight of generations of alcoholism, sexual repression and the lack of communication bears down upon the children. The poems show the narrator's increasing fragmentation through the structure and images of the poems. What the narrator remembers is juxtaposed with the family's "official" story of many events, devaluing the concepts of truth, and historical fact. The themes and imagery revealed in the first three sections are repeated, as the problems of the parents and the grandparents are multiplied and compounded in the third generation.

The narrator concludes on a note of disintegration and rage at the end of the fourth section. However, the letters from the father throughout Where the tongue roots lie temper the narrator's negative discoveries with a strong sense of loyalty, hope, and love within the family unit. There is no one true family history for the narrator to discover.
For my friend Lois Berry who taught me how to fight a good fight

No story is ever told just once.
Michael Ondaatje Running in the Family
TABLE OF CONTENTS

1: To find such a thing –                                           1

   Not quite the real story                                   2

   When a B.C. person comes to study in the civilized navel of Central Canada               4

   Letter from home                                          5

   Full moon tracing                                         6

   What my mother tells me                                 7

   The documentation of funerals                             8

   Stamp River and Logging Truck, Vancouver Island       9

   Hunting grandfathers                                    10

   What my father tells me                                  11

   Where the horses are buried                                13

   (OPEN!!)                                                 15

   Letters: A                                                 16

   Grandfathers' dream                                      17

   Letters: B                                                 18

   1915 Dodge Touring-4 cylinder, 30/35 horsepower.
   Price when new $785. On display at Harrah's Automobile Collection, Reno.                             19

   Dreaming of babies                                        20

   Letters: C                                                 21

   You'd know me                                             22

   Historacle book                                         23 2: Grandparents -- Sam & Sarah

Grandad: Sam & photographs
Grandma Archer's poem
Before this photo
Hidden documents, hidden details
Mid 1930s: Sarah
1: Document: The War Letter 2: Not document
Song for Rose Marie
Deadfalls
A water falling
TV Guide

3: Grandparents -- Tall Tommy Walker with Jean, and then her other husband

Document: L.G. Backward Movement Listen to John Henry rock of ages After they are married Photograph: Mom in the hat Jean's flight
The new house
Walking through Tommy's old neighborhood: Vancouver My grandfather's day
At sixty-three
Echoes: Jim, her second husband
The other grandfather

4: Descendants
Father
And if
A fine romance
Doors
Things happen not in daylight
The borrowed suit
What I don't remember
When you fed me your milk Remember
February
Christmas morning
The play: whispers
Hospital
Birthday card
Mother night
Penis poem(s)

Faller, Vancouver Island & Sitka Spruce. One Truckload Equals a Two-Bedroom House.

Echoes from the new divorcee

Back to Port
1: To find such a thing -- tracing the wounds of love

Not quite the real story

I've gotten out of the habit of drinking when I talk about it. It was a New Years' resolution, to stop drinking when alone or telling these stories that make me want to gag, how I finally managed to escape. If I drink when I think about it or if I'm drunk when I start telling the stories, I get violent and maudlin and throw my body around and start to shake and I taste salt and I usually break something, my glasses or a chair or bruise my leg where it shows. Sometimes I burn smokes, I have to burn myself or something. If I break my glasses I can't see and I start crying and I usually have to get somebody to walk me home. I lose a lot of friends that way.

He's a cheap man, never pays full price for anything, alway's has to haggle, bargain. It is embarrassing to go into town with him, he'd stop people on the street as they were going into Fields or Robinsons and ask them how much they wanted for their car. He had 18 Pontiac Strat-o-chiefs from 65-68 among the trees in the yard. Always had one running, was always looking for parts for it, tinkering with it, trying to find one in slightly better shape. For a good price. Always going for coffee when it rained. I'm taking the girls to town. He wanted to have us to himself, to stare at our breastless t-shirts and crinkly shorts, turn up the country music on the radio, drive the logging roads with his hands on our shoulders, on our hair, on our legs.

You never take a bath when mom isn't there, she has to be in the kitchen, not out in the yard. If you can't hear her humming shuffling around, you call to her, get her to come in, to wash your hair. If she goes away on a visit, away for two weeks to relatives, you and your sister take turns watching the door, making loud noises, dropping the pot on the stove when he comes in from outside. Now, you have to scrub 15 minutes in the shower after you tell the story.

(cont.)
Look at these two girls you guys aren't my girls the sharpest little girls there ever was? They're not going to mess with any trashy guys from around here when they grow up always touching grasping shoulders, pulling arms this way and that, showing his friends in the Golden Lantern how soft we were, how malleable, how good and loving and quiet. My stomach lurches every time he touches me, goosebumps, my eyes grow tight and I think he can't touch me here all those people will they know can they see it on my face my face must be dirty. Holding my breath over bumps when we are in the truck, hoping he'll use both hands on the wheel. I am the oldest. I have to sit next to him, to save her from him, keep as much from her as I can. I close my eyes as he drives, pretend it's a snake I feel on my neck, curling round my ears, crushing my shoulder.
When a B.C. person comes to study in the civilized navel of Central Canada there are people here who have never seen an alder split red wood open to the cold wet air never seen the Island from the ferry the green edge so sharp salt air cuts salt water here there are bird prints in the foot of snow on my sill women in fox fur coats shovel the sidewalks of boutiques Letter from home

246 C-8
Port Alberni BC

Hi patty
Things are going pretty good I ges it is no good to hold your breath and wait.
I like the mug
I use it all the time.
It make an Old man feel pretty good.
I hope everything is good on your end.
I ges I get a little depressed but I get pissed of when I can’t do the thinks I want or like to do so much for that Bullshit, I have been going to write you for 2 wk. but to sit down long enough is hard.
It is 2 PM and it is raining like Hell so I can’t get myself organised yet.
Take note of addresse at Top don’t look spelling or. writing Just sink, you are lucky you get 2 pages, I sending you rightup on Sheila.
I was talking to your Mother.
She gave me envelope + stamp and addressed it.
God you see it rain + blowing outside thank Christ I am not working in it.
So much for this Bullshit, I am going to town an have a coffee and mail this to you.
I hope everything is all write I will phone you next wk. early morning 6 AM here

Lods of Love
Dad
Full moon tracing

look at that moon up there above the car dealership peeking through my blinds at me tracing the lines of family born where died when you nosy moon you know this already go pull tides somewhere else go affect someone else’s blood go burn some other poet with your one clear eye
What my mother tells me

ABOUT TOMMY WALKER, AND HER MOTHER JEAN:

My dad used to work in the woollen mills, he was a loom fixer in Ontario, in Vancouver later on. He was born in Markham, Ontario.

When I was 8 months old, he and my mom lived in Bridal Falls, he loaded gypsum onto trucks in the mine there, August 1938. Then, I think they lived on my grandparents’ farm until he joined the army. He was in the Rocky Mountain Rangers, an Okanagan reserve militia outfit, but he was in the militia in Ontario before too, in Borden, Ontario. When he trained in Victoria, me, Mom and Verna stayed in the Gorge Motel until he went overseas in January 1941. He joined in June 1940, Verna was born that January. We moved back to Enderby in February 1941 and my mom started teaching again. We moved into a brick house owned by an old lady, Mrs. Jones. 1943 or so we went to Ashton Creek, then in 1944 back to the brick house in Enderby. Anne Kirby was the housekeeper, the butcher used to stay there too, at different times, looked after us kids.

When dad came back from overseas we all lived there until we moved to Arrowhead in 1945. Uncle Alan drove us in the 2-ton farm truck, all our stuff, sewing machine, furniture, clothes, it took all day to get there on logging roads. Dad came afterwards. We lived above the general store in Arrowhead, and my mom taught school.
The documentation of funerals

clouds of death notices clippings and letters for funerals my dad can't remember his mom dad aunt grandparents saved them the black and white snapshots catalogue of family without the bible each clump of words tastes of the old country England another link broken to the cool clay soil now we are rooted to this rocky valley a wildness that is catching.

Hi Patty
Well since you went back east We went to Oyama in Aug 18 Sept 1 we went to Penticton to a A.A. Rally this weekend was A.A. in P.A. Everything is O.K. here if I take these back pills it helps to.
Doreen is off work holladay till Oct 1.
We are going to drive to Reno and see if she can win some moneys.
I have niver been there We are going to be gone 8-9 days.
Sheila is raising hell because I didn't fix her car (too bad) I will try to send a card. I put $100 in Bank for you. I hope everything is O.K. with you. If not phone me. Lots of Love Dad + Doreen
Hunting grandfathers

I am hunting that red-haired grandfather who always lied about his age mom sends me a copy of a militia certificate according to this, he was a brigadier(?) in the canadian artillery letters smudged, corner-chewed

.it hid in his pocket for years

This is some other Tommy Walker keeping the card in his wallet till it rotted destroyed it rubbing against himself What my father tells me

ABOUT HIS FAMILY:

My mom and Aunt Millie both worked in the mill, a woollen mill or a linen mill, they used to run the machines, my mom could tell you how good a piece of material was by the feel of it. In World War 1 your grandma was only fifteen or so, & she was crying and a man asked her "what you crying for, lass?" and she said it was because she could only work a 8-hour day, she was too young to work a full day at the mill.

Dad & Mom got married in 1923, he went back to England and talked her family into coming out. There's a big church south of the Globe beer parlour in Nanaimo, the church towards the Bastion, that's where they got married. Came up to Port from England, then afterwards went back down island and got married.

They had four kids, two dead daughters-- Lily at 9 months, then ten years later Betty Jean, still-born. In between, me and Rosie.

Dad started working on the docks maybe 1922, started steady 1928 or something, his pension only went back to 1932, there was the Alberni Valley Waterfront Workers Association from 1935 that he was involved in, but there was a big strike and Vancouver broke the union-- after 1943 all the unions and so forth joined to one, joined the ILWU, except Victoria, they joined the ILA, now that's the mafia and so on on the east coast.

(cont.)
Before he retired he got hurt. He and Jack Sherwood were playing around on the deck of the ship in June 1955 and he slipped, had to have 2 discs removed, he'd had shrapnel in his back from the first World War, 17 years in the hold and it never bothered him. He was 52 when Rosie was born and he went topside, he'd had to go back down into the hold cos they went from 15 gangs to 3 in World War Two. In World War 1, he was a machine gunner, a shell burst and he was the only survivor, he had shrapnel in his back and a big chunk of meat out of his right leg, at Verdun I think. Course, the compensation board fucked him around some after the accident at work— he was retirement age and they used that against him.

He did odd jobs after that, carpentry, helped build the house, helped Tommy when he was sober.

ABOUT TOMMY WALKER:

Tommy helped re-build the house the year after you were born, 1959, him and Sven Berquist on Labour Day weekend tore the old roof off and put on the other one-- we had to dig up the garden of potatoes and we put them all in the back bedroom and it rained on them. Potatoes a foot deep in there, over a ton of potatoes going sour. Tommy was ok when he first came over, then he got wind of a job over in Vancouver, for a while he was at Miracle Valley rehab centre with the Salvation Army in the Fraser Valley trying to kick the drinking. When he had his stroke I went over to Vancouver— he was living downtown, been there 5 or 6 months and was in a little room over the Army & Navy, used to hang out in Victory Square. He had his stroke in the old White Spot on Carroll St, first thing in the morning. 1960, I think. He gave me shit when I went to see him cos I didn't bring him a bottle into Shaughnessy Hospital.
Where the horses are buried

when the father loved the mother we were a family of small people there were holes in our house a silence pulling the hair tight at the back of our ears wax and ashes stuffed down our throats black things waited for us to open our mouths where the horses are buried in the back yard how we ate dad rabid with alcohol throwing all the dishes down the front steps or those whispered things we thought we dreamed playing house with the lights out under the blankets in our small beds the old innocent tongue pulled out new edited versions broken in don't tell the doctor about... grandma mustn't know...

(cont.)
that faint blue crease runs from my lower lip between breasts over belly to my groin to my cunt where the tongue roots run where the secrets of the family return born there
Hi Patty
   I hope this info. will do the trick for you. Well how are you doing. I had that flue and I was good and sick for 10 days.
I lost 10 lbs but not my gut.
I switched Doctor's now I have a Female but she is good. She has got me taking lots of VITAMINS.
She has got me feeling in a better mood + healthier than I have in the last 2 yr's.
Has you can gather everything good here for now Hope everything is O.K. on your end. I think I will phone you some time.

Lots of Luck
   All the Best
   O X O X O X
   X    Dad    O
   O X O X O X
Letters:

A: Ask Veterans' Affairs about my two dead grandfathers:

which reserve units before the war, and where when did he join the regular forces, where did he train what was the name of the ship he went across the Atlantic in who else was in his unit, from where, what did they do tavel route through England and France when would they get leave, where would they go which battles were they in, where were they wounded, which hospitals were they sent to, when did they go back to the front promotions? demotions?
who was mentioned in Sam Archer's "War Will" listed in his paybook Grandfathers' dream

We were running climbing to the top of the mountain from the fortress built beneath the green curve of cattle farms

We heard the noise a long way off and they came over the edge of the rise-- two helicopters bearing horses slung by chest harnesses stallions hanging like kittens pinched by the neck back heels dragging

That's mine you said arm waving when a gust pulls one chopper down and the blades hack into black slicing red flesh black horseflesh cutting the green grass heels haunches stomach lungs and finally the chopper pulls up half a horse swinging beneath B: Reply from Veteran's Affairs

26 October 1989

Dear Pat Archer

This is in response to your letter dated 13 October 1989 in which you requested information on your two grandfathers, Samuel Archer and Thomas Walker.

I have taken the liberty of transferring your request to the Personnel Records Centre of the National Archives of Canada as this is where all military documents are maintained. The National Archives will reply directly to you.

If I can be of any further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me.

etc....
1915 Dodge Touring-4 cylinder, 30/35 horsepower. Price when new $785. On display at Harrah's Automobile Collection, Reno.

Hi patty
    Well we went and came back We had lots of fun it is a different lifestyle we broke even on the machine's We went to see all the old car's That picture of that old truck my dad had was 1917 Dodge touring car that was made into a truck Dad put 2 transmissions to double is power.
From the front it looked a lot like this one.
We went to Vergina Ct. it was Nuts.
A letter or Ph. Call to follow

    Lots of Lov
    Dad + Doreen
Dreaming of babies

me 31 years old in a white box far from home some strange weather here strange language

I swallow my grandmother carrying my father in her golden belly the 31st spring of her brown eyes a continent away from home baby Lily already buried under the heavy cedar roots her spring  my fall same lightning C: Reply from the National Archives

Dear Sir:

Re: 180930, Samuel ARCHER
     Thomas WALKER

This is in reply to your letter, in which you request information from the service records of the above named.

May we explain that under the stipulations of the Privacy Act, access to records or release of personal information relating to an individual is not permitted without the written consent of the individual concerned. In the event that the individual has been dead for less than 20 years, limited information may be released to members of the immediate family, if proof of death and evidence of relationship are provided. There are no restrictions placed on information contained in the records of individuals who have been dead for more than 20 years.

Accordingly, before we can comply with your request, please provide us with their signed authorization for release of information or, if deceased, with evidence of their death as well as proof of your relationship to them.

Sincerely,

e tc...
You'd know me

Grandad you'd know me by my liquored smile when I walk home that stare I give the mirror cooking    always cooking something And the drink

yes and I could sing to you you my whiskey-haired grandfather dedicate 'Al Bowly's in Heaven' or Springsteen to you as I sing them I smell you behind me there are no bars where you are now where the hell can we go where they show hockey games and serve good beer where are you with your grizzled red hair your dragging leg and fading sex life I need the myth have to write it somehow I swear

Hi Patty
   This is that Historacle book I was telling you about you can get the drift of what it was like when I was a kid.
You can editt what you want.
I hope you will excuse my spelling, sound it out and you will get it.
Anyhow everything is O.K. here I have a hell of a cold I cant seem to get rid of it.
I have been taking Cod-Liver Oil for year's 8 yr. and I think they help.
I would like to know what you want for Cristmas I think I will send you monies then you can get what you want I am going to close for now see you latter Lots of Lov.
   Dad + Doreen
The Toronto phone book

 A column and a half of Archers, five S. Archers, one Fred, one Reverend, one Archer Q.C., Archer Advertising, Archer Manufacturers, Archer's Drug Store
 41 Glens, six J. Glens  18 Pickles, no S. Pickles, but a Pickles Deli & Grill
 Two and a half pages of Walkers, including Walker Silencers, Walker Marketing of Canada, Walker Hiram and Sons Limited, Walker James Lion Packing, One Thomas Walker 20 years after the beggars in the metro are my grandad Walker

20 years after he dies 30 years after he falls off the west coast skid road into the hospital losing half his body his eyes are rubbie's eyes red and chalk blue skin like winter-skimmed milk he too leans against the stained wall holds his dead left hand cupped shaking as he holds it with the good arm yet I cannot put anything in that pink bowled hand he falls in love with her-- she is a strong green tree arced in the heavy wind Grandad: Sam & photographs

he loves the idea of a camera stares back at his device a hundred times sends picture postcards of himself to his mother in Kelfield Yorkshire to his girl wherever that smile    mouth open just a bit . always a smoke in his hand his eyes quiver at the lense he doesn't trust a machine he can't drive or take apart

Sam takes photos of his pigs    trucks children    houses    horses    brothers in law always something in his other hand always standing hand    tight around the lit cigarett face fading into yellowed paper Sarah Pickles' poem

Sarah learns about sex in the woollen mill how babies begin where they come out working twelve-hour shifts in lint-clotted air the oldest of six kids thirteen years old and her first job making heavy blankets for soldiers

Babies didn’t come from the clock the midwife brought they didn’t come in laundry wagons or out from a woman’s navel There it was the story so bloody she held it in her mouth for five years before asking her mother on the night before her third marriage

She tells me her story I learn babies come from woollen mills.
Before this photo

before this photo my grandparents marry in the biggest stone church in Nanaimo beside the Queens beer parlour before this photo Sarah operates a loom has her own bank account travels across the Atlantic, across Canada by train to live with Sam before this photo Sam gets drunk he is happy because his brother-in-law is visiting he is close to Jack who introduced him to Sarah there are boxes of beer cooling in the cellar before this photo they have dinner roast beef mashed yorkshire pudding brussels sprouts carrots bread gravy apple pie and ice cream as a treat drop of sherry before 4 o'clock dinner

(cont.)
before this photo the cow grazed where the house is now in another photo Sam saws a tree wider than he is tall where the bathroom now sits after this photo Sam gets into an argument with his young cousin Fred about the raising of children after this photo the Second World War starts Sam is injured in an accident at work and his son begins to drink heavily after this photo they all go back into the house from the porch the men smoke and talk in the front room the women do the dishes and clean up in the kitchen Jack and Margaret leave to go back to New Zealand.

Night sneaks through the heavy douglas firs behind the house, over the rise treading into their dreams.
Sam and Sarah dream in black and white.
Hidden documents, hidden details

How much is a man worth?
$6 a day horse logging in the early 20s running a 6-horse sled down the skid road hauling logs
At work before breakfast, feed the team then feed yourself in camp stay there over the weekend for your room and board look after the team $6 for handfallers and teamsters, $4.50 for millwork

How much is a leg worth?
$17.50 a month Claim # 142420 March 14 1936 Firm # 10174 24 years old Harry Pickles at Spratt’s mill labourer, part-time blacksmith plays trumpet in the Legion band Saturday nights the 24’ x 24’ timber falls as he works on the timber deck smashes his pelvis crushes both legs

First they cut off half a foot then at the knee above the knee chasing the gangrene

$17.50 a month from the WCB a wooden left leg from mid-thigh
Mid 1930s: Sarah

Sarah's right hand on the railing legs broad apart under flowered housedress her jaw and hips jut proudly at the camera a secret in her belly black hair black eyes centre the frame beneath the roof's peaked crown

Sam's face beside her the color of the gi. ~my west coast sky he waits for the photograph to end their new house crowded by douglas firs hay field on the left ravine to the right Sarah smiles darkly a figurehead cutting the wind.

Dear Sam + Sarah

Just a few lines to let you know Laura Tom's wife as been buried today at Wakefield.
Mrs Burley came to see me last sunday June 15 and said if I cared to go to funeral I could go with her Monday so I went when we got to the cemetery no funeral till Tuesday they were preparing a common grave for her death and he said he could not do anything they had to bury her of course you know Edwin was dead there was Harry + Florence at the funeral today. When Mrs Burley and I got to the cemetery on Monday I said we don't want her in a common grave if we can do anything so the Registerer of the Cemetery said if we liked to make up our minds then we could have a semi Private Grave for 30/- so Mrs Burley did so but nothing else could be altered so the Poor soul as been laid to rest in a Poor Law Coffin but a little bit - Sam’s brother Tom is stationed somewhere on the coast of England, too far from Selby, and his wife dies of TB and he can’t do anything. Lily, Sam’s sister writes him the letter the day of the funeral, June 17, which arrives in Port Alberni July 12. Mrs Burley is Laura’s mother, the dead Edwin is Laura’s son. There are no more children.

Or in 1941, Sam’s brother John Thomas, ‘Tom’, is sixty-four. He is toothless in the Kelfield workhouse, having left his wife for another woman in 1929. They had four children: Edwin dead, two boys enlisted, the daughter Florence working as a receptionist for her fiancé, Harry, a doctor. Laura dies of liver cancer.

Or the second sheet of the letter is missing. The censor took large chunks from it and when Sarah pulled it from the envelope it fell to the floor in tiny pieces. They used it to light the fire in the stove. Laura doesn’t exist. The war and Yorkshire clay ate her bones and my father doesn’t remember her, this woman from his parents’ letter, without punctuation.

Or Laura is Sam’s niece, his favorite niece, married to his drunkard nephew Tom, Lily’s son, or Hannah’s son, or Miriam’s son. She wore her lace dress in her Poor Law Coffin, they sang Abide With Me and read the service together from the Book of Common Prayer. In 1947, Sam, his brothers-in-law Jack and Harry, and nephew Fred raise some money amongst themselves and put a white stone on her grave.
Song for Rose Marie

Sarah, does it scare you, pregnant at 41?
your husband 52 worked topside until the war now he's back in ships' holds the union broken, seniority screwed he carries his back-full of shrapnel moving wood

how do you hold your moving belly save your floating baby from the cedar roots in the cemetery — grow her big like her war-roaring brother — nine years old and kicking your legs because there's not enough sugar in his oatmeal whisper hold your tongue tight in your mouth dream in your peach bedroom beside your sleeping man see yourself in the round bureau mirror in that moonlight see your mother's whitening eyes.

Deadfalls

his teeth shine his mud grey skin sucked tight to his bones he's fed junket and instant breakfast hoards his life in the darkened room listens to a mumbled bible hears horses screaming
  .

  his wife turns the egg-timer makes her seventh batch of plum jam stirs the falling sugar as it pounds and jells plum tree clotted with pink fruit every breath fills the ground with bruising sweet globes peels and pits and stirs cools the jars outside his teeth glow as the cooling wax seals the jam he wants his children pushes away his wife she skins and pits another pot stirs her August jam.

A water falling

In the hospital he fights it head bobs and shakes pulling at the mask clawed fingers tangle in tubes and his bird-boned chest air wrestles in and out of one fluid lung he drowns with his own flesh swimming in the august sunshine he caws and jumps the women hold him rub his feet hold the strangling hand keep the mask over his face as he bucks drowning

he slides in Sarah sits on the orange couch watches American TV as warm light sneaks into damp night plastered papered painted walls cracking

KVOS 12 Bellingham news wrestling Hawaii Five-O moon launch my yorkshire grandmother eating her american diet she loves wrestling loves the slap of heavy bodies Cable for life her birthday present from her kids 3: Grandparents -- Tall Tommy Walker

with Jean, and then her other husband the velvet currency that roars between men and women The gun will then fire till the spring is released of trigger and untill magazine is empty. The explosion having taken place the bullet travels down the barrel followed by the gasses a portion of which escapes through the gass vent into the gass chamber and gass regulator where they are partly purified and regulated.

Tommy Walker hates khaki green dreams of black and red sackcloth and velvet as he polishes his pusser boots the brick rowhouses scowl at him Annex  Sunnyside  Parkdale he takes the Exhibition streetcar down to the lake studies his gun course in raw February holds in his mouth (the key to the city)

Imagine Tommy Walker singing and playing guitar. Imagine him whole, both his arms working strumming, red-headed and lovely. He loves to sing, be the centre of attention. Have the young churchless socialist women sit in a circle on the floor around him. They all clap and sing the choruses together long into the smokey night. His low warbling tenor snaking around their woollen dresses, fingerling the crisp curled hair tickling their tender pearl earlobes. He brings his songs and voice and body of Toronto the big city the hub of political thought and vision and virility to the little Interior towns. The union meetings in church basements with sympathetic Methodist ministers and ministers' daughters and the idealistic young teacher so sharp in the eyes and so soft in the mouth humming and smiling at his feet.
After they are married

after they are married
    he drives a team in the gypsum mine at Bridal Falls    10 hours hauling carts with pony teams out of the mountain shaft They live in a two room house and he reads newspapers after work hunting through the grey lines of type hungry for news of the International worries of Germany glad to have a job dreams of starting the union

Jean dreams of teaching going back to work, making money they need Not accepting married women for positions too many men not working so she scrubs the linoleum daily knits baby clothes and thinks of ways to make meat go farther at night v' der Tommy's red-headed weight she stares at the moon and whispers the names of the towns on the rail-line back to Enderby

Bridal Falls Yale Boston Bar Keefers Lytton Spences Bridge Ashcroft Savona Tranquille Kamloops Chase Salmon Arm Sicamous Enderby
a little girl you are a little girl gone to grandma glen's farm with your mom and dad and your dad so tall and his hair all fire in the summer sun and your mom not very happy with a big belly and she squints and squishes her mouth a lot and dad wears that greeny brown suit and mom just wants to be quiet and him to stay home but he goes out goes out in the afternoon with the haying crew Hey Tommy, got a thirst on ya? drives them to town into Enderby town and your mom squints until he comes back home for supper.

After supper you're going to go and dad is going to catch the train to go away and everyone talks quiet the women talk soft in the yellow kitchen tucking away dishes and snapping the cloth the men go out and lean on the fence judging the alfalfa your mom won't let you go outside with your dad so you watch out the open window they talk quiet too except your dad who laughs pretends to make a gun in the air waves his hands laughs.

Just before you get in the car big black car your dad wants to shoot your picture sticks his army hat on your head and stands all 2 1/2 years of you in pink overalls in front of the tree. Click.
Jean's flight

her open palm cuts between cup and saucer she feeds small food to her husband words lie on the tablecloth between them as they slap down the cards both playing solitaire he roams out into the back garden her palm cuts between coffee cup and saucer she twists the ring off her finger takes the shower leaves the ring in his cup on his plate when she goes out the front door

The new house

even now she hates pounding nails

Jean buys the old army wash-hut with a cement sub-floor she and her daughters turn it into a house

The girls will do anything not to pound nails cook supper, wash dishes, anything but pound nails thousands and thousands of nails the house built of reclaimed lumber reclaimed nails after school and every weekend Barb and her sister Verna pull and pound nails pull them with the claw hammer pound them on the sawhorses in the tarped-in porch pound out all the bends and curves that nails remember

When Jean hammers nails in into the sheetboard or 2x4 they bend and curl and warp in rusty glory
Walking through Tommy's old neighborhood: Vancouver

The Arco on Pender  Balmoral  Argyll  Sunrise on Hastings  Winters Hotel on Abbot  Avalon  Salvation Army mission  Army & Navy on Carroll  windows out under the A & N sign  a rubber plant on the fire escape  rusting hanging over the alley into the noisy street  Wonder Rooms  Wonder Hotel  rooms for rent  transformers on the heavy poles squaring the alley opening  kerosene telephone-pole arch  urine  BC Collateral  bruises ground into a man's face  he leans against the wall fist clenched just outside the beer parlour door  Cosy Corner Groceries bummimg a smoke 'Bella' tattooed on her shoulder  Capital Barbershop between the train station & the greyhound terminal  Silver Hotel  brick box  no windows  the green paths of Victory Square
My grandfather's day

I used to think November 11 was Grandad Walker's birthday.
He'd get up early pull out the blue Legion blazer with the blood and gold wire crest leave for 11 AM service-- fill the kitchen table with cloth poppies all the week before he would stand Tall Tommy Walker
his box slung over shoulders outside the liquor store soliciting all his friends

The crowd of greying men troop from legion bar to legion bar people buy Tommy rye and water-- maybe they think it's his birthday too.
The legions are crowded all the bars closed on the holiday.

(cont.)
door opens there he is crashing against the railing of the stairs after midnight poured out of the Legion into the waiting Fairway Taxi he's lost his cane spent the whole day dreaming he was whole again he is tall Tommy Walker green-eyed gunner killer of ladies father of babies dancer socialist god then he trips dragging his left foot left leg left side over the sill smacks flat hard bounces off the wall onto the hallway linoleum snoring

At sixty-three

Grandad Walker decides to taste greatness at sixty-three. Dragging his bunion, leatherseated largeboned rocker behind him, he enters the CJAV Rockathon at the Kinsman’s Fall Fair. The drill hall stage-- he and 5 other fame seekers from the Alberni Valley rock, knit, smoke and drink their way through the 3 day long weekend on the radio. Every hour, the announcer interviews the ‘rockers’, who resist the fudge booth and smells of popcorn and 4-H cattle barn to rock away in Bentwood, Easyboy and Boston. Through the lonely steamy orange-edged night, the rockers listen to the music roaring from the midway rides, the screams from the salt and pepper shaker, and the laughs and catcalls from the parties in the bushes beyond the fence. Grandad sips his rye from the styrofoam cup, smokes and tells his dirty war stories, hiding from ‘tall Tommy Walker’ on the radio, from his women and rages and walking dragging his left leg, left arm swinging swinging from the shoulder loose and heavy, 10 pounds of stroked-useless meat and bone. Hiding on stage, on the radio, an old man rocking. An old man intact, telling stories, gently moving down and back. On the radio he is whole, always whole.
Echoes: Jim, her second husband he is dying the doctors say it's his liver after long years of making homemade wine a stubborn contrary man won't go to the doctor in their hometown talks of wills and funerals she tempts him with death at the lake house hopes cedar fronts and cool lake water will pull him from his bed away from these tubes and gauges to sit on the deck watching the cool autumn coming That other grandfather his eyes hood    swivel a cool lizard propped up in the hospital bed it is hot    outside it is cold    here in the room his doctor is death and the food is bitter his sins roll from her eyes she no longer touches him her taut mouth holds back the violence his body falling in onto itself and his bones have no bones she will give him no more salt for his wounds die marxist unrepentant hands of a millworker gardener drinker childmolester cooling as they cross in his lap

4: Descendants –

that thing unsaid pulls out your tongue Father

dad
I love you in spite of yourself despite your bones that poke out strong in my nose and in my voice your drunken hands are hidden come out as I sit here drinking alone writing letters

You should have left the Alberni Valley stayed away when you were 17 stayed on that Chilcotin ranch kept away from pure west coast women and your father's love of rye
And if

if my mom had married that science nerd she dated in Vernon in 1956, the one with the grass and cat and everything allergies, hands breaking out in a rash everytime he mowed the lawn, who kept her out 'till 2 AM on Grad night bought her a pink orchid--

I would have better teeth, have taken commerce at UBC, go to Europe every summer to study french in France, do Christmas in Mazatlan.

He's a doc'or in immunology now, lives in North Vancouver.
I'd have even more allergies-- cats dust pollen men-- I'd drink just as much and my mother would drink much more.

I wouldn't be in Montreal a scorpio political or constantly in love.
A fine romance

he used to tell us about leaving hickeys on her belly on their honeymoon we were six, five, four we thought hickeys were a candy

Barb was working in the bank, eighteen years old. It was 1956. All the women in the bank were getting married, having babies. All the men were married. She'd just come home from failing grade 13. All the men in the bank were married. Of course she was a virgin.

Charlie
  of course was not

Her sister Verna used to hang out with Charlie's crowd. Sometimes she'd bring along her sister Barb. He remembered her from ten years before when he drove her dad home from the bar. She liked to dance.

the doctor said he only broke his leg, lucky he lived with a tire track up his back the alcohol relaxed him as if he was asleep

Always the father coming home after midnight smelling of rye. The mother's absolute silence freezing him out. He sold the kids' ice skates, hocked them to buy booze on a sunday night. Burned down the car when he dropped a cigaret butt in the upholstery, falling out of the car into the house. They dream of the house burning down for months.

   (cont.)
Verna talked her into it she went to see Charlie in the hospital Verna was two weeks pregnant Barb was still a virgin

He promised her he'd quit drinking, and he did, for a while. Barb stopped dreaming of her father stepping on the puppy, breaking its neck. She thought of how surprised her friends in the bank would be.

at twenty-eight he thought her small pink smartness would save him from rye and the back seats of Pontiacs

They got married in June in the United Church, because it was cheap.
Verna was six months pregnant so a woman from work was the matron of honour. They drove to the Calgary Stampede on their honeymoon, in a blue and white 1956 Pontiac sedan.

nights he comes home late from work sits us down on the couch under the gun rack tells us how much he loves our mother Doors

Their bedroom had no door down at the end of the hallway. when we woke them up early for Christmas mornings and emergencies we would walk LOUDLY as if we knew we had to signal our coming.

at night they would talk (at night they would fight) we could hear the rumbles through the unpainted walls my father's gravelly growl rolling under our doors, then a pause for my mother's too quiet answer. we were scared to hear the noises from their cave, all too certain something we didn't want to know was going to happen.

(cont.)
All that tension because of the lack of a door.

one day, as a gift, we nailed a blanket to the arch, cutting off the cave from the rest of the house.

but my father in his drunk rage tore it down, ripped the tacks from the door frame.

he needed the open door to escape he needed to make noise.

we stayed quiet at our end of the hallway.

I have a door you have a door we both have locks and chains and keys.

we don't make noise when we fuck we hardly make noise when we fight

we don't have kids
Things happen not in daylight

that grandfather babysits slides cool hands around between legs sweet little girl, shh you stand stiff, on his lap dress shoved up to your armpits he wants just to smell to see the pink roses on your panties You are maybe four, he granite-headed. the words for the secret are too old for you its ugly teeth already clamped round you.
A good victim.

when you are seven
  your uncle brings over a friend for dinner. his eyes glint at you he wants to tell you a secret he wants you to help him hide something eyes can’t leave his face struck as stone you want to fall down stop that word from shining through your body Things that touch you in the dark move your face

(cont.)
Always in your life there's a hole in your belly the shape of a grey man’s hand sitting cold still holding the flesh dark those pink roses wither language grows smokey perverse as you curl the corners in hiding with your fancy edges a shamed dark void unshared.
The borrowed suit

first time I saw my dad in a black suit small on him, he looked tense, tight we asked where he was going to a funeral we asked what's a funeral

Dube was his best friend they worked years together in Passmore's gang when the lumbership tipped he stood on the load too long slipped down between the hull and Assembly Dock timbers slipping in the water    on the dock then she tipped back upright balanced in the wind two million feet of douglas fir bound for Japan when they finally got him out they knew him by his tight caulk boots What I don't remember

the friend of the family at the christmas party sings old swedish songs and plays accordian in the dark leather chair white hair and pale old man skin glows fills his study.
He unzips pulls himself out does not touch me just begs me to touch, to look at him glowing in the darkened room

I am more interested in the shiny things he has on his desk in his pretty books I don't remember escaping

In summer he comes to visit my grandad wants to go look at the garden grandad sends me with him

I am ready for him this time laugh at his cock tell him I know what THAT is and my father's is bigger dance down the garden path to my grandad easing his stroke pain in beer

I don't remember telling anyone.
When you fed me your milk

(after reading And the One Doesn't Stir Without the Other by Luce Irigaray)

When you filled me with your milk, mother blood roared in my ears songs of long insidious battles gurgled burning down my baby throat You had the scars to prove it and a magic glass that hid them every night there were bones in that milk bones that led my bones into your paths pulling my taut skin into patterns You filled the void with food always cooking always feeding, filling

Now I turn back to find you mother after birth and age have pulled me taller I cannot find you Your milkshape bloodshape warm and missing

I am too grown the milk sits frozen in my mouth Remember

smells the black grit on the wet window which window my window I see that and blankets pink blankets and I feel a hot hand pushing my head lower look look touch touch where is my mother I am wearing pajamas
I don’t think he touches me

Hiding one night he can’t find me between the desk and the wall curl up close to the window late and it’s cold in my blue pajamas maybe he’ll never find me stuck and the smell the dampness green of the tree outside the window rot of the grit inside the window smell of hiding smell of sex can’t remember what it looks like just the smell of leaf mould on wooden window frames in summer
February

snow the weekend dad had the ulcer cut out of him when we woke blood in the toilet on the bathroom floor later the scar across his rounding belly side to side a smile in his flesh Christmas morning

I remember the kangaroo lady. When we woke up Christmas morning she was there, on a kitchen chair in the livingroom. She wore a baby-shit yellow sweater, smelling sour. She was laughing and talking with Dad. She had bruises on her face, on her neck, scratches all over her hands. I was fascinated, watching her puffy laughing face. Mom was quiet, breaking something in the other room. She was mad. The lady told us she got the bruises boxing with kangaroos, that she won the boxing match. The scratches came when they kicked you. We saw a big red male kangaroo, a rope ring and the crowd cheering her on. Dad kept laughing, we kept asking questions, she drank more rye from the teacup.
The play: whispers

fascinated by where babies come from five kids in our family, five in our cousins’ thoughts swirled in our mouths whispering in the beds under blankets at birthday sleepovers—show each other how to masturbate at ten—can’t imagine breasts or hard cocks—see them all as soft like Grandpa Jim’s or small like our brothers’ think of bondage and heat and pain as we dry hump whisper against each other drive each other on Hospital

can’t go to school have to stay home your mother has to sleep with you calms you from your pain pulls you from the edge of the night you go to the hospital with the ulcer a week of tests for you ten years old brain scans barium x-rays enemas bladder x-rays where the nurse can’t insert the tube properly cos you’re so small a non-dairy diet castor oil blood tests urine samples a psychiatrist have to be careful he asks about school about your family your dad made you promise you wouldn’t tell about the half-made house about the drinking the yelling the broken glass you don’t tell but you fear he can read behind your eyes.

Birthday card

Hi Patty
Sorry it took so long to write you but I had a shed 12’ X 14’ built to put tools and such also a porch on the mobile home in Cherry Cr. and I was helping as much as I could and we painted the inside of our house.
I hope you are having a good time.
When I was doing thing around here I was thinking about all that I was going to say in this letter, and now I got a day when its raining and I got time I cant think of them all.
I gess it is Old age setting in

Lots of Love + Happy
   O X O X O Birthday X O X   Dad + Doreen   X
   O X O X O X O O X O O

69 Mother night

she is it she drives me    mother night here in this city of saxophones and windows open to the dark

I drink of her I get drunk from her no one is as beautiful as mother night run the fan as I sleep eat and drink    deep in the clock body roaring can't rest and the dreams are crazy it's hard to shake    mother night hard to wake    get up all day long my lazy eyes want to roll back to sleep back to mother night in the early morning I am she mine the power skin that aches ambrosia I am she    mother night Penis poem(s)

makes me laugh this silly little piece of flesh one-eyed brainless mole playing like putting on lipstick hold you in my mouth stubby & wide yet bigger round than my wrist count the veins on the shaft wet the purpling eye when he's small he's very very small and when he's good he's awe full foreskin-- what's it good for? something to pull, pinch in the dark hides your private eye your long long skin puckered and tucked a hot pink budded rose a fist of a flower

as I move up and down I think of tongues mine yours penis as a flat tongue try to hold my teeth away think of breathing eating

(cont.)
I always move too slow up & down holding you to my own rhythm your fingers prod and tap my shoulder faster as your heart beats faster you twitch in my mouth your body talking grandma said Burt Reynolds couldn’t have been "very big" if he could hide it on the bear rug with his hand maybe he has big hands

I have to stop now and then to catch my breath to calm my throat and tongue I grab a sip of water your leg thrown off the bed eyes still hurt from the shine of your white hips the glow of your tight morning skin

I come up off your groin my mind full of salty dreams you pull up my head with your hot hands kiss me hard suck me to your sweaty chest your tongue searching flavour hot you are always hot in my mouth

Hi PATTY

Feb 22
I got your postcard 2 wk. ago so it time to write you.
Everthing is good here.
I am going to send a letter or phone.
I can put more in a letter.
As you can see I am having trouble Well it is raining like hell. and windy it has been miserable for 2 weeks and trying to work around the house.
My back is about the same.
But I will get by.
Doreen got May off work.
We went South. We got into Oregon, About 30 mi South of Portland.
I hope everything is good for you I hope to send a letter soon I am going to get your mother and I and some old picture and put something 一起 Keep your chin UP.

Lov. Dad.
Echoes from the new divorcée you took away my babies lay with me whispering in the sweat and grain dust held my swelling belly in your arm now this diamond ring cuts me and I burn spit to make you hurt you touched your own little girls in the dark, sweated over them covered their mouths their eyes stopped their ears touched them behind the corners of their mouths pushed sounds of sshhh and push in the growing creases of their brain made their eyes see penises inside every pair of pants

I will turn you out of your skin like you pulled my babies out of their little-girl skins make you choke on this diamond ring
Back to Port

I could give it all up I guess & just roar on back there to that twisted cleft between mountain ranges where fingers of inlet and twisted lakes almost touch I could do the midnight move stuff just run drown myself in the Arlington Hotel nightly dance that last slow dance with a different logger or millworker each weekday night getta pair of romeos like my Dad maybe go someplace classy like Polly's or Stardust on the weekend making it back to the Arly for last call and off-sales of course maybe I'd join the Portal Players help them put on existential plays for the tiny inteligencia maybe I'd work at the local rag at a bookstore at a gas station keep myself in dope grow it in my basement get all my friends to set me up with men they know any men intelligent men abuse my body write a lot